CONNECTIONS THROUGH WINE

OWNER'S PROFILE

From transforming cities to nurturing grapes, serendipity describes the LDV Winery evolution. As professional community and strategic planners, LDV owners Curt Dunham and Peggy Fiandaca made a career developing successful plans for clients. That life journey of possibilities has led to the development of a vineyard estate.

Curt Dunham Winemaker/Vineyard Manager

It was a bottle of 1974 BV Cabernet Sauvignon that ignited a live-long wine passion. At 16, while tasting that bottle of wine Curt was amazed that a grape could taste like blackberries, cherries, coffee, and chocolate.

Traveling to wine regions around the world, collecting wine from small producers, and a deep love of cooking influenced his winemaking style. As Curt says, "Each day I learn more, I am excited about the possibilities for making fine wine, and thrilled to share our passion."

Peggy Fiandaca Brand Manager

Wine is a character actor in every Italian family and Peggy's family was no different. The Fiandaca family emigrated from Sicily to a Chicago Italian neighborhood. Her maternal grandfather, William Hogan was a well-known bootlegger in Kentucky during Prohibition. With this kind of heritage, her urban planning career was a sidestep on the road to winemaking.

Every day brings a new experience in the vineyard or winery, where creativity, knowledge, and patience are challenged. Watching someone taste wine and identify the flavor characteristics for the first time or examine a vine closely with a new appreciation, provides great satisfaction.

OUR CONNECTION TO THE LAND

EARTH'S FRUITS COME FULL CIRCLE

The magic of the “grape to glass” journey is the result of an undeniable connection to the land. LDV Winery's approach to winemaking is to make wines that showcase from where the grapes were grown.

These locational factors included:

- Mountain Environment
- Pristine and Plentiful Water
- Superior Air and Water Drainage
- Volcanic Soil
- No Previous Commercial Agriculture

None of this would have been possible without finding the perfect spot. We found the five key locational factors we desired at our special site in the Chiricahua Mountain foothills in Southeastern Arizona at 5,000 feet above sea level.

Our philosophy is focused on being good land stewards while growing the highest quality wine grapes. We believe great wine starts in the vineyard and our responsibility is to enrich the flavors to produce memorable wines hoping the next generation will continue this legacy.

Winemaker Interview

What about Southeastern Arizona excites you to grow grapes and make wine every day?

I have always been a big fan of mountain fruit and the wines made from those areas. Whether it is Purisima Mountain, Howell Mountain, or Mount Veeder, I have gravitated toward the lushness and intensity of high-altitude wines. When I investigated our site, at 5,000-foot elevation with a 10,000-foot mountain in the back yard coupled with volcanic soil and a creek with 100-year old oak trees, I thought why not here!

What makes LDV Winery wines unique?

It is all about our place! My winemaking style focuses on accentuating the grapes that are grown here and showcasing the fruit's nuances in each wine. We get what I call the reverse California effect. During the ripening period, the Chiricahua Mountains create a micro-climate – hot sunny mornings, cooler, cloudy afternoons, and cool nights. California has cool foggy mornings and sunny, hot afternoons. In either case, there is a long respite between the heat of the day from one day to the next. This differential intensifies the flavors and creates bright acidity. We believe so much in this place that our wines are made from 100% estate grown fruit from our vineyard.

What 3 words describe LDV wines and why?

Plush. Robust. Memorable. Our winemaking style is extremely gentle with very little manipulation and long aging to create a plush, soft mouth feel. Robust because we do not make shy wines. Our mountain fruit is intense and highly concentrated with nice acidity. As a result, our wines are always memorable.
