Curt Lawrence Dunham
Owner/Winemaker

A love of wine is traced back to a bottle of 1972 BV Cabernet Sauvignon brought home by parents from a trip to Napa Valley.

I couldn't believe a grape could taste like blackberries, cherries, coffee, and chocolate. Learning to cook and travel expanded the interest and knowledge of winemaking. These visits were not the typical tourist visits but appointments with winemakers at small wineries focused on learning the entire process; never dreaming I would someday be making it myself - with my name on the bottle!

As I learn more about the grapes that are being produced from our unique vineyard location, I am excited about the possibilities while also building the skills of my craft. I look forward to sharing the fruits of my labor and my passion with you.

Peggy Fiandaca
Owner/Marketing Director

Wine is a character actor in every Italian family. The Fiandaca family emigrated from Sicily to a Chicago Italian neighborhood. My mom's father, William Hogan was a well known bootlegger in Kentucky during Prohibition. With this kind of heritage, my urban planning career was a side step on the road to growing grapes and producing wines.

Every day brings a new experience in the vineyard or winery where my creativity, knowledge, and patience are challenged. Watching someone taste wine and identify the flavor characteristics for the first time or examine a vine closely with a new appreciation for its role in producing that wine, provides me with such satisfaction. That connection to the land, our environment, and to each other is what this winemaking journey is all about.
